

Municipal and Non-profit Leasing in Association with Baystone Government Finance, a division of KS StateBank

Libraries of all types and sizes need financial help. The more money a library is able to raise, the better the quality of the programs and services it can provide to its local communities.

Typically libraries make technology purchases with money from state, local, and federal funding; bond referendums; operational budgets; grants; generosity of local citizens; and, leasing.

A lease purchase agreement is a way for public, private and non-profit libraries to preserve cash, control budgets, and do away with lengthy and expensive bond referendums.

- A municipal or non-profit lease is an installment purchase agreement also known as a Lease-to-Own program with no residual and no end-of-lease buyout.
- A municipal or non-profit lease offers customers the opportunity to reduce monthly outlays, preserve cash, fund immediate projects, and increase monetary control.

Digital equipment, financed with municipal or non-profit leases, includes computers, instructional technology, telecommunications, and other library support equipment.
